heart failure is diagnosed in more than a half-million people each year and often women are most affected